

"Andrew does an excellent job in tailoring his workshop to the needs and habits of those of us who write or edit for impact."

– Katharina Nachbar,

Writing for change • A workshop in Addis Ababa • Andrew Johnston

I train people in international organizations to write more powerfully.

My writing and editing workshops are aimed at specialists who write for a wider public. They include hands-on writing and editing practice.

Workshops are limited to 15 people to give all participants a chance to share their needs and questions. I tailor each workshop by analysing samples of participants' writing.

My core workshops cover a wide range of writing situations, from reports and policy briefs to press releases and blogs. They will help you to:

- identify audiences, goals and contexts
- plan and structure documents logically and convincingly
- build clear, concise paragraphs and sentences
- choose the best words and identify words to omit
- avoid, explain or replace jargon.
